Alexandra Ciardi House, London, NW1 0AP

A rare opportunity has arisen in our Services for Children and Families division to manage a strong and very well established multi disciplinary service. The National Clinical Assessment and Treatment Service (NCATS) brings together the disciplines of psychiatry, psychology, psychotherapy and social work in a unique blend that provides assessment and treatment for children and young people who display harmful sexual behavior. The team also provides specialist consultations to colleagues in other agencies as well as delivering training to professional groups.

The successful applicant will be an experienced social care manager with demonstrable ability in managing in multi-disciplinary settings. The post holder will be experienced in therapeutic work with children involving highly complex attachment issues and harmful sexual behaviour and those who present with a range of other behavioural and mental health problems.

Given the highly complex nature of the work and the impact on staff, experience of clinical supervision would be desirable in this role. The post holder will need to work closely with the Service Manager and with the Clinical Director to ensure clear and unambiguous lines of accountability within the NHS and the NSPCC policies and procedures.

NCATS provides a 4th tier, NHS, UK wide service and takes referrals from across the country. Its reputation for multi disciplinary work is second to none in the field of sexually abusive behaviour assessment, intervention and prevention. The successful applicant will receive full support from the service manager and will be given regular supervision as well as full training and induction.
